Hon. Simon Cameron celebrated his 82d birthday on the 8th at Havana, Cuba, by a reception and dinner in the evening. He will sail for Philadelphia Saturday.
The Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, in a column of Cabinet gossip, says: "Lincoln is highly spoken of by all who know him as a manly, modest fellow, who minds his own business very well. His appointments please both John A. Logan and Judge Davis very much, and seems to offend nobody."
D. D. SPEARS.
In our new columns to-day will be found a synopsis of the remarks of Senator Davis, of this state, delivered yesterday in the senate, declining the chairmanship of the judiciary committee. This speech will doubtless put an end to the speculations indulged in by the public for the past four years as to the political status of the fat senator from Illinois. He has been popularly regarded as a sort of nondescript—a political hermaphrodite, so to speak—voting with the Republican side of the chamber when it would do the brigadiers no harm, and with the Democrats when it would not particularly hurt the Republicans. He now boldly proclaims his purpose to vote with the Democrats upon the question of organizing the senate, because he owes his present official position to that party, but he wishes it distinctly understood that he does not do this because of any love he entertains for that party, which, he says, he can never act with "unless its methods are changed and its wisdom broadened." This is about the most direct slap in the face that a man like Judge Davis could administer, and must be immensely consoling to such stalwart Democrats as our neighbor of the Review, who claims the credit of being the discoverer and inventor of D. D. as a senatorial possibility.
But there is one feature of this noteworthy speech to which we specially desire to call the attention of a certain class of Republicans, who have fondly imagined that Senator Davis might, sometime during his term, assist in the accomplishment of purposes designed to result to the advantage of the Republican party. He says he must vote to sustain the present Democratic organization of the senate, as "an honorable recognition of the trust confided to him by the Democrats in 1877," though he takes care to disclaim all responsibility for the act. It is not just to criticize our big senator for his course in this regard, nor is it proper to question his motives. He owes his seat in the senate to the votes of the Democratic members of the Illinois legislature, and he is in honor bound to carry out their wishes. He owes nothing to the Republicans, and they have no right to expect anything at his hands. The public should come to understand that no honorable public officer can disregard the wishes of the men by whose votes he was elected. He must of necessity carry out the policies of the party by virtue of whose suffrages he holds office. Any other course of action would justly bring upon him not only the opposition but the contempt of his former friends. Judge Davis very properly recognizes this political truth, although he offers an apology for his course. He swallows the dose, but gags, metaphorically speaking, as the ugly mass goes down his capacious neck. It is cheerful reading—to Democrats.

GARFIELD'S LITTLE YELLOW DOG
The Washington Star says: That little yellow dog, that was seen following the carriage containing General Garfield in the procession, has a history, that is worth printing even on this day, when our columns are so pressed for space. About a year ago, the same dog followed General Garfield from where he got off a street car at the corner of Thirteenth and F streets to his house corner Thirteenth and I streets. The General, noticing the dog, threw him a piece of meat, and forgot the occurrence until he met the same dog on the same corner the next day. Following him home again he was rewarded by another piece of meat. Finally the dog made General Garfield's house a kind of a temporary headquarters. When General Garfield went to Chicago as a delegate to the convention that nominated him, the dog followed him to the depot. Before the news reached here of the nomination of General Garfield the dog set up a joyful barking that was almost unbearable. "Something has happened," said one of the ladies of the house, "and here is a telegraph messenger." The message contained information of the nomination, the story was told him, and he said he would take the dog to Ohio with him, but when the time for starting arrived the dog could not be found, the animal being of a roving nature. General Garfield never saw the dog since that yesterday, when riding out with a friend, he saw him, calling him by his name, "Bab." The dog recognized the voice, and appeared to be happy. As the General arrived at the Biggs House the dog again disappeared. He saw nothing of him until today as the procession was moving from the White House. The dog followed the carriage all the way to the Capitol, but must have got mixed up or lost in some way, for he did not come back with it.
Emma Abbott and Baldwin.
When Emma Abbott gave one of her concerts in Peoria a few months since, Baldwin went behind the scenes after the curtain had dropped. "Why, dear Mr. Baldwin," said she, "I'm so glad to see you." "How are you, Em?" replied he. "I haven't seen you, Mr. Baldwin," said the prima donna, "since the days I went to school with you, I believe." "Oh, yes, you have, Em," said the bashful Baldwin, "you need to come into my office, and sit down at my table and write, puff of yourself, when you want to brag." "So I did," said she, "wasn't that jolly, Mr. Baldwin?"
A Cure for Small-Pox.
In view of the fact that small-pox is raging in several localities in the State, we publish the following as a cure for this loathsome disease. It was furnished the Liverpool Mercury by a well-known English physician:
"I am willing to risk my reputation as a public man if the worst case of small-pox cannot be cured in three days simply by cream of tartar. This is the sure and never-failing remedy. One ounce of cream of tartar dissolved in a pint of boiling water. Drink when cold at short intervals. It can be taken at any time, and is a sure preventive as well as a curative. It is known to have cured thousands of cases without failure. It never leaves a mark, never causes blindness, and always prevents tedious lingering."
MAHONEY, of Virginia, is for the present about as important an individual as there is in the country. One of his former pupils gives an interesting description of him as he appeared at the Rappahannock Military academy in 1848 and also of a meeting with him on the battlefield of Gettysburg:
"I well remember how he appeared the evening he arrived at the academy to take charge of the scientific and military departments. If you can conceive of a tarantula with green goggles on, you have the effect made upon me by the first sight of this remarkable man. Eighty or ninety pounds of animal matter, mostly covered with hair and green goggles, striking amazement and terror into the hearts of the wondering, gazing boys, who had up to this time been masters of the situation. At this time, in formal social life he was as one paralyzed. He was diffident to a degree of actual suffering. He imparted more information in a few months than other teachers had done in years.
I saw him sitting, girl-fashion, on his horse at Gettysburg just as the first battle in the general engagement was about to begin. He was in a field alone, away from his command, calmly regarding the enemy on the opposite heights. Approaching, I said: 'General, I think we are on the eve of a great victory.' Without looking around, he replied with emphasis: 'Why, — it, sir, we are on the eve of the most disastrous defeat of the war.'"

The "rock-a-way" is the latest variety of value. It is largely patronized by the indolently inclined. It derives its name from the swaying motion produced by changing the foot on the first note of each bar only, and is a lazy development of the old "hop" waltz.
The most fortunate of the votaries of bacarat is, I hear, a gentleman who was penniless a year or two ago, but who has won above £20,000. If this be so, asks a correspondent, why is he compounding his losses on the turf at 5s in the pound? To win a £20,000 at bacarat, and to compound turf gambling debts, seems hardly legitimate, according to the not very high standard of gambling ethics.
The Prince of Wales gave a dinner to twenty-five guests on Saturday last at the Marlborough club, to decide on the qualifications of a new chef de cuisine. Each guest was to give his unbiased opinion on the menu card before him. The cook was voted a Thurstonite not up to the mark.
Who owns the Bonds?
The treasury records are said to show that William H. Vanderbilt owns $50,000,000 worth of United States bonds, the quarterly interest on which is $500,000. Other members of the family have $3,000,000 more, with a quarterly interest of $50,000. Louis McLane, of San Francisco, has $5,000,000 bonds, with a quarterly interest income of $50,000. J. C. Flood has $10,000,000 of bonds, with a quarterly revenue from the investment of $100,000, and Miss Jennie Flood, his daughter, still unmarried, has in her name the sum of $2,000,000 in bonds, and quarterly pocket-money therefrom of $25,000. Christine Nilsson has $78,000 of 5's of 1881. Lotte, the actress, has $50,000 in 5's, and Emma Thursby has $14,000 of 6's.
The South on Warfield
From the Philadelphia Press.
It is a notable fact that the Southern press is nearly unanimous in its praise of President Garfield's inaugural address, commendation of its broad and liberal tone exceeding the modified criticism of a few journals of what they pleased to term his expression of partisanship and sectionalism. The great majority of these newspapers agree, however, that this is now a united country, and that General Garfield intends to be president of the whole of it. And evidently they are not sorry that such is to be the fact.
A DETROIT physician, who seems to have a rare idea of what fun is, has published a treatise on delirium tremens, in which he says death from such source is not painful, but very pleasant. Many who have witnessed the ravings of a patient with delirium tremens, when it required three or four men to hold him in bed, in his anxiety to escape from serpents which crawled upon the ceiling, and rats that hung about his pillow; when his best friends had turned to be the worst friends in the imagination of the sufferer, may reasonably doubt the doctor's conclusions. Death from no other disease leaves such marks upon the poor wrecked vital organs of the body as from delirium tremens in an old drinker. The coats of the stomach, instead of being as thin as a knife-blade, are often found as thick as two in thickness, and covered with ulcers. The liver is nearly always a mass of disease, and arteries which convey the alcoholic liquors to the brain and the delicate nerve centres in an almost pure state, are necessarily diseased. If death, with the body and mind in the condition of delirium tremens, "is not painful, but very pleasant," as our Detroit doctor declares, then hanging or strangling to death must be a real luxury.
What an Orange Grove will Do.
Mr. Fairbanks, the historian of Florida and an eminent authority upon the orange, says that "an average tree will bear, season in and out, 700 oranges, and that where they are grown from the seed or transplanted regularly about sixty trees to the acre would be a fair average. Then sixty trees in a fair season would yield 42,000 oranges, worth at the grove $840. This is a cold, reliable estimate of what an ordinary orange grove will do; many will do more, and still more will do less, but $840 worth of fruit upon an acre of ground will strike the northern farmer as decidedly profitable."

TELEGRAPHIC
DAVID DAVIS.
He Must Vote with the Democrats, but he Don't Like It.
His Apology for Being Found in their Company.
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—Senator David Davis' speech in the Senate declining the Chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee, but declaring his intention to vote for the Democratic organization, created a sensation, as he had not advised either Democrats or Republicans of his purpose.
Mr. Davis recited the facts connected with his election in 1877, by the Illinois Legislature, and said: "No man ever entered Congress free from political commitment or personal obligation than I did, four years ago. I had been identified with the Republican party, and still look back with pride to its grand achievements. The extreme measures after the war and the excesses incidental to civil strife drove tens of thousands into the liberal movement of 1872. I found myself in company with Charles F. Adams, Horace Greeley, Carl Schurz, Murat Halstead, Stanley Matthews, R. E. Fenton, John Wentworth, Samuel Bowles, Lyman Trumbull, Whitelaw Reid, Leonard Sweet and others known to fame, who had been conspicuous Republicans. Some of them have returned to the fold from which they had separated—doubtless prompted by patriotic motives. I have never acted distinctively with the Democratic party, and unless its methods are changed and its wisdom broadened, there is little prospect of me revising my opinions calmly formed. The country would be materially benefited by the reconstruction of both parties, especially since the errors of one seem to perpetuate the power of the other. I have voted on all public measures according to my convictions of right, and I propose to continue in that course. An honorable recognition of the trust generously confided to my keeping by the Democratic voters in 1877, requires me to sustain the existing organization of the Senate, for which I disclaim all responsibility. Parts of it are neither agreeable to my taste nor to my judgment. In giving this vote, it is proper for me to say whatever may be the result, that I can accept no honor at the hands of either side. The country needs rest from sectional strife. The voice of patriotism demands peace and fraternal fellowship, North and South, East and West. Every good citizen should desire the success of the Administration, for we all ought to have a common interest in the glory and greatness of the Republic. Measures intended to advance either shall have my cordial support. The President and his Cabinet are entitled to a fair hearing and to be judged impartially by their acts. If they fail to justify public confidence, it will be a misfortune which has overtaken our Administrations having equally good intentions and prospects. I shall vote for the appointment of all these committees except the Judiciary Committee. I wish to retain my old place on the Judiciary Committee."
The President has nominated Henry G. Pearson to be postmaster of New York.
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—After two and a half hours' discussion, the Republicans so far gained their point of preventing the committees from being organized, as to force the Democrats to move an executive session, which was carried. The Democrats are not united on the question, and there are signs of wavering in their ranks. They now talk about a compromise.
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—The declaration of the chairmanship of the judiciary committee by David Davis has been the subject of considerable comment to-day. It came up in the course of senate proceedings and excited much attention on the floor and in the galleries. Mr. Davis reviewed his peculiar standing as regards the two political parties, showing why he was on the fence and why he couldn't come down on either side.
Those Democrats who had supposed Mr. Davis safe when chosen for the chairmanship, and the act of policy would secure him for their side, are now feeling very much chagrined. Others of the same party affect to be perfectly satisfied with the simple declaration that he would act with them upon a reorganization though he may be independent afterward. But these are the Democrats who think more of a few petty senate offices than of any future national legislation. All the rest are ready to concede the declaration of Davis seals the fate of the Democracy so far as the control of the senate is concerned. The rumors of any compromise on organization are now at an end, not because the Democrats have not shown a disposition, but because there were no reciprocal manifestations on the other side.
LITTLE ROCK, ARK., March 11.—The murder of Miss Mattie Ishmael last week, at her home, near Jonesboro, Craighead county, has been supplemented by swift work on the part of Judge Lynch. Four negroes, named Green Harris, Giles Peck, John Woods and Burr Hoskins, were arrested on suspicion and tried before Justices Jackson and Akers, at New Haven church, about eight miles north of Jonesboro. The trial drew together hundreds of people, and as the case went on, and the evidence disclosed the positive guilt of the prisoners, it was feared they would be lynched on the spot. When the trial was concluded the magistrates bound the accused over to await the action of the grand jury, and directed their removal to Jonesboro jail, but the hour being very late, they were placed in the church under a strong guard, while the crowd slowly dispersed, muttering threats of vengeance. At midnight a body of masked men, variously estimated at from 200 to 300, surrounded the building in which the prisoners were confined, "corporated the guards, broke in the doors and windows, seized the terrified negroes and dragging them to a tree about 200 yards away, hung them. After completing the ghastly work the lynchers withdrew as swiftly and silently as they had gathered, leaving the bodies of their victims dangling in the air and presenting a horrible spectacle in the moonlight. It is reported that the negroes made a full confession of their guilt, claiming that they had killed Miss Ishmael for refusing to lead them to the spot where her father's money was concealed. The crime and punishment form one of the blackest pages in the annals of the state.
